An email was received from Melinda Boss research officer for the LactaMap breast feeding program
[see below]

Hi Simon,

Thank you for following up with me.

I'm pleased to tell you that LactaMap will be publicly launched on March 27th. As you know, LactaMap is an online lactation care support system designed to provide support to lactating women and infants experiencing difficulty with breastfeeding. LactaMap will be available at www.LactaMap.com. It will be free for anyone to use.

I really appreciate the contribution your members made to this project and would be happy to provide an update on LactaMap to you all later in the year if you would like.

Regarding the Rotary logos, I would like to include these in a presentation that I am giving in London in a few weeks. This will be projected onto enormous screens. Be sure to use high resolution so that they don't look pixelated. High resolution images are also needed for us to be able to upload them to the LactaMap website. Do you have jpeg images of the logos at the end of your emails will look blurry if I use them.

Thanks again for all the work you and your members did to contribute to this project.

Kind regards,
Melinda
